Product in and money out! Law enforcement agencies are often challenged by the degradation of communities they serve brought on by organized crime groups. These groups use vehicles to traffic guns, humans, narcotics and currency and the unidentified faces of victims and offenders are often caught in various types of imagery. These vehicles and faces are leads that need to be resolved.

Join retired NYPD Dectective Tom Joyce, Vice President of Business Development for Vigilant Solutions, as he discusses how vehicle location data and facial recognition technology can help disrupt these organized crime groups and have an effect on the local crime rates in the communities they operate.
